UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

9 ATM SHAFIQL KHALID; XENCARE
10 SOFTWARE, INC.,

Plaintiffs,

11 v.

12 MICROSOFT CORPORATION, a 13 Washington Corporation,

Defendant.

Case No. 2:24-cv-00449

PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR REMAND PURSUANT TO 28 U.S.C.
§ 1447(c)

NOTED ON MOTION CALENDAR:
MAY 3, 2024

15 I. INTRODUCTION

16 Plaintiffs, ATM Shafiqul Khalid and Xencare Software, Inc. ("Plaintiffs" or 17 "Khalid") hereby move for an order remanding this case to state court pursuant to 28 U.S.C.
18 § 1447(c). Plaintiffs also seek an award of "just costs and any actual expenses, including 19 attorney's fees, incurred as a result of the removal." Id.

20 Remand is required because this case has been pending for more than five years and 21 as explained further below, Defendant Microsoft Corporation ("Microsoft") has known 22 about Khalid's damages theory based on lost patent licensing revenues since the case was 23 filed in 2019. Microsoft's reliance on expert reports served March 15, 2024, calculating 24 those damages is merely a pretext for removal and an improper attempt to delay the trial,

1 which was set for May 20, 2024, and to avoid a forthcoming ruling on Khalid’s dispositive 2 motion on liability.

3       If Microsoft believed any of Khalid’s claims “arise under” federal patent law (they 4 do not), its remedy was to file a dispositive motion based on preemption in Superior Court 5 or to seek an order limiting or excluding portions of Khalid’s damages case. None of that 6 happened. Instead, Microsoft removed the case to disrupt the orderly resolution of Khalid’s 7 claims.

9       Additionally, this court lacks subject matter jurisdiction. This is not a diversity case 10 and none of Khalid’s claims arise under federal law.

11       Accordingly, Khalid seeks remand under § 1447(c) and his fees and costs because 12 no basis existed in good faith for Microsoft’s removal.
 13

14           II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND<sup>1</sup>

15       This case was filed pro se in 2019 asserting claims related to Microsoft’s contention 16 that it owns three patents issued to Khalid, U.S. Patent Nos. 8,286,219 (“the ’219 Patent”), 17 8,782,637 (“the ’637 Patent”) and 10,846,118 (“the ’118 Patent”) (collectively “the 18 Disputed Patents”). After the case was dismissed on a CR 12(b)(6) motion, Khalid appealed.
 19 On October 12, 2020, the Court of Appeals reversed as to “one claim arising under the CPA, 20 his claims for breach of contract and breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair 21 dealing, and his UDJA requests for declaratory relief as it relates to the ownership of his 22 patents and the contractual right of first refusal.” Khalid v. Microsoft Corp., No. 80508-8-23 I, 2020 Wash. App. LEXIS 2669, at *33 (Ct. App. Oct. 12, 2020).

 (“Walters Decl.”) and exhibits thereto filed contemporaneously with this motion.

1 Relevant here, Khalid's original complaint, filed January 28, 2019, alleged that 2 Microsoft's improper claims to own the Disputed Patents harmed Khalid's "IP licensing 3 and/or incubation business" which business involved "efforts to ... license developed 4 technologies, [sic] to others." (Walters Decl., ¶2 and Ex. A.) This same allegation was 5 carried over into Khalid's second amended complaint filed November 20, 2023. (Id. at Ex.
 6 B, ¶3.)

7 Khalid handled this case pro se until undersigned counsel appeared on September 8 28, 2023, to assist his efforts to complete discovery, prepare the case for trial, and to conduct 9 the trial. (Id. at ¶4.) Since counsel appeared for Khalid, the parties have produced thousands 10 of pages of relevant documents, taken several depositions, briefed and argued cross-motions 11 for summary judgment, and declared the case ready for trial pursuant to King County local 12 civil rules. (Id. at ¶5 and Ex. C.) The parties' Joint Statement of Trial Readiness was filed 13 on March 29, 2024, just four days prior to Microsoft's removal. (Id.) The case was set for 14 trial on May 20, 2024, and parties were awaiting a ruling on cross-motions for summary
 15 judgment when Microsoft filed its notice of removal. (Id.)

16 On September 18, 2023, Plaintiffs served a supplemental witness disclosure 17 pursuant to King County local civil rules. This disclosure identified both Tony Mason<sup>2</sup> and 18 Scott Cragun as experts and included a summary of their expected testimony. (Id. at ¶8.)
 19 Khalid disclosed testimony from Tony Mason about "[h]ow critical [the Dispute Patents] 20 are to Microsoft's products" and "how those patents are related to other products like the 21 Sony Play Station console." (Id. at Ex. E.) For both Mr. Mason and Scott Cragun, Khalid 22

23
 25
 26 <sup>2</sup> A substantially similar disclosure was made by Khalid as to Mr. Mason's expected testimony on March 20, 2023 (Walters Decl. at ¶9 and Exhibit F.)

1 disclosed that each would testify as to “items related to damages” including testimony 2 related to (1) a document Khalid called “Damage Model Washington State Court,” (2) a 3 document called “Claim Chart Explaining how Xbox One and Windows-10 is infringing 4 US patent No. 8,782,637, 10,846,118, and 8,286,219,” and (3) a document called “Claim 5 Chart Explaining how Sony PlayStation is infringing US patent No. 8,782,637, 10,846,118, 6 and 8,286,219.” (Id. at ¶10 and Exs. E-F.)
 7

8 The first document referenced in the September 2023 disclosures for witnesses 9 Mason and Cragun, “Damage Model Washington State Court,” was served on March 20, 10 2023, and it disclosed in detail one of Khalid’s damages theories based on “a hypothetical 11 licensing negotiation model where Khalid would have earned [a] fair royalty from his 12 inventions” but for Microsoft’s wrongful conduct. (Id. at ¶10.) The next two documents 13 were claim charts mapping the elements of several claims of US Patent Nos. 8,782,637 and 14 10,846,118 onto Microsoft’s Xbox One product and Sony’s Play Station PS4 product. (Id.)
 15 The disclosure for Microsoft also included a claim chart mapping the elements of Claim 1 16 of U.S. 8,286,219 onto Microsoft’s Windows 10 S-mode product. (Id.) 17

18 The parties conducted a mediation on February 8, 2024, and in connection with this, 19 Plaintiffs provided a draft report from its expert Tony Mason. (Id. at ¶11 and Ex. G.)
 20 Plaintiffs’ mediation statement also included preliminary damages calculations from Scott 21 Cragun, including a calculation for “[d]amages based on per-unit license received by 22 Microsoft as a result of improper ownership claims” to the Disputed Patents. (Id.)

24 III. ARGUMENT AND AUTHORITY

25 A. Legal Standard

26 The Ninth Circuit “strictly construes the removal statute against removal

1 jurisdiction.” Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992) (per curiam) (citing 2 Boggs v. Lewis, 863 F.2d 662, 663 (9th Cir. 1988); Takeda v. Northwestern Nat'l Life Ins.
 3 Co., 765 F.2d 815, 818 (9th Cir. 1985). “Federal jurisdiction must be rejected if there is any 4 doubt as to the right of removal in the first instance.” Id. (citing Libhart v. Santa Monica 5 Dairy Co., 592 F.2d 1062, 1064 (9th Cir. 1979)).
 6

7 The defendant has the burden of establishing that removal is proper. Nishimoto v.
 8 Federman-Bachrach & Assocs., 903 F.2d 709, 712 n.3 (9th Cir. 1990); Emrich v. Touche 9 Ross & Co., 846 F.2d 1190, 1195 (9th Cir. 1988).

10 According to 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b), defendants must file a “notice of removal . . .
 11 within thirty days after receipt . . . of a copy of an amended pleading, motion, order or other 12 paper from which it may first be ascertained that the case is one which is or has become 13 removable.” Id. If a notice of removal is filed after this thirty-day window, it is untimely 14 and remand to state court is appropriate. See Eyak Native Village v. Exxon Corp., 25 F.3d 15 773, 783 (9th Cir. 1994) (holding untimely a company’s notice of removal when it came 16 more than a year after the company became aware of the nature of plaintiffs’ claims).
 17

18       B. Khalid’s Claims do Not Arise Under Patent Law; This Court Lacks 19                   Subject Matter Jurisdiction.

20 As its jurisdictional basis for removal, Microsoft cites 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (federal 21 question) and § 1338(a) (original jurisdiction for claims “arising under any Act of Congress 22 relating to patents”) and § 1338(b) (original jurisdiction for any claims “asserting a claim 23 of unfair competition when joined with a substantial and related claim under the copyright, 24 patent, plant variety protection or trademark laws”). (Dkt. No. 1 at 1.) No other basis for 25 federal jurisdiction is alleged by Microsoft, such as for example, diversity jurisdiction under

1   § 1332. (Id.) Nor could diversity be alleged in this case because all parties reside in 2 Washington state.

3                 Nowhere in its notice of removal does Microsoft address its asserted basis for federal 4 jurisdiction. (Dkt. No. 1.) Instead, Microsoft states in conclusory fashion that expert reports 5 served March 15, 2024, “squarely alleged patent infringement by Microsoft as a source of 6 liability in the state court litigation.” (Id. at 3.) But neither of the expert reports allege patent 7 infringement. (See id. at 36-76.) Instead, Mr. Mason’s opinion describes the technology 8 claimed in the ’637 and ’118 patents, explaining its value to Microsoft’s business and the 9 business of several other companies. (Id. at 40-42.) Scott Cragun then calculates the 10 expected licensing revenue from this technology that, but for Microsoft’s wrongful claim 11 to own the Disputed Patents, Khalid would have received. (Id. at 61-75.) Importantly, 12 damage based on lost licensing revenue (i.e., “lost royalties”) was but one of several 13 alternative damage calculations disclosed by Khalid within the report of Mr. Cragun. (Id. at 14 62, ¶20.) Mr. Cragun also proposed calculations based on “lost enterprise value, lost 15 compensation, and Microsoft’s unjust enrichment.” (Id.)

16                 Regardless, Microsoft’s reliance on statements made by Khalid’s experts as the 17 basis for alleging federal subject matter jurisdiction is obviously misplaced. ““The presence 18 or absence of federal-question jurisdiction is governed by the well-pleaded complaint rule, 19 which provides that federal jurisdiction exists only when a federal question is presented on 20 the face of the plaintiff’s properly pleaded complaint.”” Recinos v. Buttes Homeowners 21 Ass’n, No. 3:23-cv-05780-LK, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 164502, at *3 (W.D. Wash. Sep. 15, 22 2023) (quoting Republican Party of Guam v. Gutierrez, 277 F.3d 1086, 1089 (9th Cir.
 23 2002)). Thus, to the extent Microsoft looks for federal jurisdiction within disclosures by

1 Khalid's experts, it is looking in the wrong place. To ascertain whether federal jurisdiction
 2 exists, the Court must analyze the elements of each cause of action pleaded in Khalid's 3 complaint. Id.

4 An action "arises under" federal law when "federal law creates the cause of action."
 5 Merrell Dow Pharm. Inc. v. Thompson, 478 U.S. 804, 808, 106 S. Ct. 3229, 92 L. Ed. 2d 6 650 (1986). "It is well settled that if the patentee pleads a cause of action based on rights 7 created by a contract, or on the common law of torts, the case is not one 'arising under' the 8 patent laws." Jim Arnold Corp. v. Hydrotech Sys., 109 F.3d 1567, 1572 (Fed. Cir. 1997).

9 When a claim finds its origins in state rather than federal law, the Supreme Court 10 has identified a "special and small category" of cases in which federal question jurisdiction 11 still exists. Empire Healthchoice Assurance, Inc., v. McVeigh, 547 U.S. 677, 699, 701, 126 12 S. Ct. 2121, 165 L. Ed. 2d 131 (2006). Federal jurisdiction over a state law claim will lie if 13 a federal issue is: (1) necessarily raised, (2) actually disputed, (3) substantial, and (4) 14 capable of resolution in federal court without disrupting the federal-state balance approved 15 by Congress. Grable & Sons Metal Prods., Inc. v. Darue Eng'g & Mfg., 545 U.S. 308, 313-16 14, 125 S. Ct. 2363, 162 L. Ed. 2d 257 (2005).

17 Here, Khalid's claims do not arise under federal law in a traditional sense because 18 all are based on Washington state law. Jim Arnold, 109 F.3d at 1572. Instead, Microsoft 19 appears to allege that Khalid's claims fall within that "special and small category" of cases 20 in which federal question jurisdiction exists over a claim based on state law. Empire, 547
 21 U.S. at 699. The operative question then becomes whether Khalid's complaint raises a claim 22 involving a federal issue meeting the four-part test from Grable. "Where all four Grable 23 requirements are met, jurisdiction is proper because there is a 'serious federal interest in

1 claiming the advantages thought to be inherent in a federal forum,’ which can be vindicated
 2 without disrupting Congress’s intended division of labor between state and federal courts.”
 3 IGT v. Acres, No. 2:22-cv-02134-RFB-EJY, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 169893, at *11 (D.
 4 Nev. Sep. 25, 2023) (quoting Grable, 545 U.S. at 313).

5 Applying the first element of the Grable test, none of Khalid’s claims “necessarily 6 raise” a federal issue. Courts should not treat the mere allegation of a “federal issue” as “a 7 password opening federal courts to any state action embracing a point of federal law.” 8 Grable 545 U.S. at 314. “Instead, the question is, does a state-law claim necessarily raise a 9 stated federal issue, actually disputed and substantial, which a federal forum may entertain 10 without disturbing any congressionally approved balance of federal and state judicial 11 responsibilities.” Id. A federal issue is necessarily raised if it is “basic,” “necessary,” 12 “pivotal,” “direct,” or “essential” to the claim. Lippitt v. Raymond James Fin. Servs., Inc., 13 340 F.3d 1033, 1045 (9th Cir. 2003).

14 Here, Microsoft contends “Plaintiffs’ state court breach of contract or related causes 15 of action [are] dependent on federal patent infringement law as a basis for liability.” (Dkt.
 16 No. 1 at 3, ¶5.) No analysis supports this contention and even a quick review of the elements 17 of Khalid’s causes of action refutes it. All of Khalid’s claims stem from a breach by 18 Microsoft of an employment agreement, pursuant to which Khalid excluded the Disputed 19 Patents by disclosing them on a list submitted prior to his employment in 2011.<sup>3</sup> (Walters 20
 21
 22
 23
 24

<sup>3</sup> Remarkably, Microsoft lost this list by deleting the email of one of its employees, Shannon Carlsen, whose email was supposed to be preserved as part of a “litigation hold.” The last two pages of Tony Mason’s expert report address this issue, analyzing the email headers from Khalid’s electronic evidence to conclude that he did, in fact, submit the list despite Microsoft’s claims to the contrary made in 2015 and 2016, which damaged Khalid and his business Xencare. (Dkt. No. 1 at 47-48.)

1 Decl., Ex. B, ¶¶78-97.) A finding of patent infringement is not “basic,” “necessary,” 2 “pivotal,” “direct,” or “essential” to any of Khalid’s claims for liability. Lippitt, 340 F.3d at 3 1045. Indeed, Microsoft’s claims to own the Disputed Patents calls Khalid’s standing to file 4 an infringement suit into question, thus preventing him from enforcing the patents until the 5 ownership question is resolved. Jim Arnold, 109 F.3d at 1577. Accordingly, there can be no 6 finding of infringement by any court until the ownership question is resolved. Id.
 7

8 Moreover, Khalid can prove damage any number of ways, none of which require a 9 finding of patent infringement by Microsoft or any other company. In this sense, Khalid’s 10 case is no different from any other alleging breach of an agreement and damages measured 11 by the value of lost licensing revenues. Corbis Corp. v. Stone, No. 64505-6-I, 2012 Wash.
 12 App. LEXIS 719, at *33 (Ct. App. Mar. 26, 2012) (affirming $9.28 million jury award for 13 expected revenue from lost patent revenues.).
 14

15 This case is like IGT where the U.S. District Court in Arizona granted remand 16 pursuant to § 1447 in September last year. See 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 169893 at *25. The 17 defendant in IGT, an inventor and business owner, removed a case asserting breach of his 18 employment agreement and breach of a contract assigning rights to one of his patents to the 19 Plaintiff. Id. at *14-15. The assignment at issue had a clause requiring the defendant to “do 20 everything possible to aid Assignee, its successors and assigns to obtain and enforce proper 21 patent protection” in the assigned patent. Id. The employment agreement created similar 22 obligations on the defendant: “to assist his Employer (Plaintiff AGI) in every way in 23 obtaining and/or enforcement of its Intellectual Property.” Id. at 17-18. The plaintiff had 24 alleged in state court that the defendant breached his agreements when he (1) forced 25 reexamination of a patent and (2) sought to limit the scope or invalidate the intellectual 1 property that he transferred through an assignment. Id. at *15.

2 Like this case, there was no basis for federal diversity jurisdiction in IGT, so the 3 defendant alleged the existence of a federal question based on patent law. Id. at *12. The 4 defendant alleged a federal issue because whether the patent was valid would determine the 5 scope of Plaintiffs' damages and because the court would be required to determine the scope 6 of the patent's claims in resolving a defense based on the doctrine of assignor estoppel. Id.
 7 at *16 and *19. Rejecting those arguments, the IGT court found Plaintiff's claims "do not 8 necessarily raise issues of federal patent law" because regardless of the validity of the patent 9 Mr. Acres had a duty "to protect the invention and AGI's rights therein." Id. at *17. This 10 was true, the court reasoned, even if findings on invalidity made in federal court (in a co-11 pending action for declaratory relief) might affect the scope damages allowable in state 12 court. Id. at *20 ("While it is true that Plaintiffs' damages claim may possibly (but not 13 necessarily) be affected by this Court's determination regarding the '263 patent, this by no 14 means makes it a necessary element of Plaintiffs' cause of action.").

15 Likewise, here, none of Khalid's claims "necessarily raise" a federal issue because 16 damages may be determined in any number of ways that do not involve construing the 17 claims of the Disputed Patents or making a finding that Microsoft or any other company 18 infringed them.

19 But even if Khalid's claims did "necessarily raise" a federal issue, federal 20 jurisdiction would fail under the third prong of the Grable test because they are not 21 "substantial." 545 U.S. at 313-314. The substantiality requirement "looks ... to the 22 importance of the issue to the federal system as a whole." Gunn v. Minton, 568 U.S. 251, 23 259-60, 133 S. Ct. 1059, 185 L. Ed. 2d 72 (2013).

1       In Gunn, the Supreme Court explained whether a patent law issue would have 2 changed the result in a prior infringement action was critical to establishing a legal 3 malpractice claim; this, however, was a hypothetical and backward-looking federal issue, 4 that, when resolved, would not have “broader significance” in terms of its application to 5 other cases or federal interests. Id. at 261-62. Thus, even though the patent issues involved 6 in the case were “vitally important” to the parties, to confer jurisdiction, “something more, 7 demonstrating that the question is significant to the federal system as a whole, is needed” 8 before a claim based on state law “arises under” the Patent Act. Id. at 263-64.

9
 10     Here, the outcome of the state law claims will not alter the status of Khalid’s patents 11 or any party that may infringe them. Alphonse v. Waller, No. 22-CV-347 JLS (DEB), 2022 12 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 113571, at *9 (S.D. Cal. June 27, 2022) (granting motion to remand state 13 law claims because “while damage is a necessary element of Plaintiff’s claims, that damage 14 need not take the form of a patent found to be invalid in a court of law”). The state law 15 claims are based on contracts creating obligations beyond and outside of the scope of 16 patentability, regardless of what Khalid believes may be infringing the intellectual property 17 improperly clouded by Microsoft’s claims to own the Disputed Patents. Even if resolution 18 of whether Microsoft or others infringe the patents may affect the scope of damages in the 19 state court action, “this is a far cry from meeting the substantiality requirement 20 under Grable and GunnIGT, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 169893, at *24.
 21
 22

23     Finally, in the absence of a substantial federal issue, “[Grable’s fourth requirement 24 [regarding the appropriate balance between federal and state judicial responsibilities] is also 25 not met.” Id. (citing Gunn, 568 U.S. at 264). Because Microsoft cannot satisfy all four 26 requirements of “arising under” jurisdiction, this Court does not have subject matter

4       Even if Microsoft had alleged a proper basis for the Court's subject matter 5 jurisdiction, none of Khalid's claims are removable. Section "1446(b) lays out two 6 pathways for removal." Dietrich v. Boeing Co., 14 F.4th 1089, 1093 (9th Cir. 2021) First, 7 under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1446(b)(1) "notice of removal of a civil action or proceeding shall be 11 28 U.S. Code § 1446(b)(1). And only if the initial pleading did not set forth any grounds for 12 removal, then "a notice of removal may be filed within thirty days after receipt by the 13 defendant, through service or otherwise, of a copy of an amended pleading, motion, order 14 or other paper from which it may first be ascertained that the case is one which is or has 15 become removable." 28 U.S. Code § 1446(b)(2)(C). Under the second pathway to removal, 16 the Ninth Circuit applies the "unequivocally clear and certain" standard for determining 17 when the removal clock begins under § 1446(b)(3). Dietrich, 14 F.4th at 1095. The purpose 18 of the standard is to "bring[] certainty and predictability to the process" and "avoid[] 19 gamesmanship in pleading." Id. at 1094.

22       Here, even if Microsoft is correct that Khalid's expert reports served March 15, 23 2024, disclosed "damages premised on a finding of infringement of valid patents by 24 Microsoft" (Dkt. No. 1 at 3, ¶ 6), Microsoft was on notice that Khalid alleged harm to his 25 "IP licensing and/or incubation business" which business involved "efforts to ... license

1 developed technologies, [sic] to others” from Khalid’s initial complaint filed in 2019.
 2 (Walters Decl. at Ex. A, ¶¶27 and 33.) In the context of these lost opportunities to license 3 the Disputed Patents, Khalid alleged that “Microsoft Xbox One product infringes claim 1, 4 4, and 20 of US patent 8,782,637.” (Id. ¶ 55.) And that “[a] nominal 1% royalty would set 5 infringement value to $4 billion that Microsoft fraudulently tried to get access to.” (Id. at 6 ¶54.) Each of these allegations was carried over into Khalid’s second amended complaint 7 filed November 20, 2023. (Id. at Ex. B, ¶¶28, 34, 56 and 57.) Accordingly, even if Khalid’s 8 expert reports served March 15, 2024, could accurately be described as “seeking damages 9 premised on a finding of infringement of valid patents by Microsoft” then Microsoft was 10 on notice through Khalid’s initial complaint of allegations that do not differ in any material 11 way.
 12

13 Moreover, Khalid’s March 20, 2023, supplemental witness disclosure explained that 14 Mr. Mason and Mr. Cragun would offer testimony in reference to documents Khalid served 15 on March 20, 2023, one entitled “Damage Model Washington State Court” and two claim 16 charts. (Id. at ¶10 and Ex. F.) The referenced claim charts map the elements of several 17 claims of U.S. Patent Nos. 8,782,637 and 10,846,118 onto Microsoft’s Xbox One product 18 and Sony’s Play Station PS4 product. The claim chart for Microsoft also mapped the 19 elements of Claim 1 of U.S. 8,286,219 onto Microsoft’s Windows 10 S-mode product. (Id.
 20 ¶ 10.) Then on February 8, 2024, in connection with mediation, Khalid provided a 21 preliminary report from its expert Tony Mason that does not differ in any way material to 22 this issue from the one served on March 15, 2024. (Id. Ex. G.) Khalid’s February 2024
 23 mediation statement also included preliminary damages calculations from Scott Cragun, 24 including a calculation for “[d]amages based on per-unit license received by Microsoft as a

1 result of improper ownership claims” to the Disputed Patents because “Microsoft has 2 essentially enjoyed a license under Khalid’s patents without remuneration to Khalid.” (Id.
 3 ¶11.) See Cohn v. Petsmart, Inc., 281 F.3d 837, 840 (9th Cir. 2002) (holding that a 4 settlement demand may provide notice of removability). The damages calculations 5 disclosed during mediation were alleged because “Microsoft’s breach resulted in damage 6 to Khalid’s patent term for at least the ’219, ’637, and ’118 patents, as he was unable to 7 license or enforce these while Microsoft maintained its improper ownership claims, which 8 effectively clouded Khalid’s title and deprived him of the benefit of the entire patent term, 9 beginning in February 2015.” (Walters Decl. at ¶11.) In short, Khalid has not obscured the 10 fact that his damages theories will consider the value of lost patent licensing revenues. His 11 initial complaint and subsequent disclosures in discovery made this “unequivocally clear 12 and certain” months, if not years prior to Microsoft’s removal. See Romulus v. CVS 13 Pharmacy, Inc., 770 F.3d 67, 75 (1st Cir. 2014) (requiring “a clear statement of the damages 14 sought or . . . [a] paper set[ting] forth sufficient facts from which the amount in controversy 15 can easily be ascertained by the defendant by simple calculation” for removal based on 16 diversity jurisdiction); Moltner v. Starbucks Coffee Co., 624 F.3d 34, 38 (2d Cir. 2010) (per 17 curiam) (requiring a paper that explicitly specifies the amount of monetary damages sought 18 for removal based on diversity jurisdiction). There is nothing in the expert reports served 19 March 15, 2024, more informative as to Microsoft’s stated basis for removability than what 20 Microsoft already new months, if not years earlier.

24 Through the disclosures made on March 20, 2023, and February 8, 2024, Khalid 25 stated essentially the same facts Microsoft claims put it on notice that that “Plaintiffs were 26 seeking damages premised on a finding of infringement of valid patents by Microsoft.”

1 Therefore, at the very latest, Microsoft needed to file a notice of removal by March 11, 2 2024—within 30 days of Khalid’s February 8, 2024, mediation-related disclosures. Instead, 3 Microsoft filed its notice of removal on April 3, 2024. Given the April 5, 2024, pretrial
 4 conference, it appears Microsoft’s notice of removal was not motivated by Khalid’s expert 5 disclosures, but the approaching pre-trial conference scheduled for April 5, 2024, the 6 pending motions for summary judgment, and the related trial scheduled for May 20, 2024.
 7 (Walters Decl. at ¶6.) In fact, the morning following Microsoft’s afterhours filing of its 8 removal notice, counsel for Microsoft contacted chambers to ensure the Court would not 9 rule on the pending motions for summary judgement. (Id. at Ex. H.)

11           D.       The Court Should Award Khalid his Attorney’s Fees and Costs

12           The evidence shows that Microsoft’s notice of removal was filed in bad faith. There 13 is simply no basis for federal subject matter jurisdiction, and even if there was, Microsoft 14 has known about this for years. The Court may award fees under either 28 U.S.C. § 1447 15 or Fed. R. Civ. P. 11. Kerbs v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Ill., No. C11-1642 MJP, 2011 U.S. Dist.
 16 LEXIS 138318, at *16 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 1, 2011).

18           An award of fees and costs under 28 U.S.C. § 1447 is discretionary. Martin v.
 19 Franklin Capital Corp., 546 U.S. 132, 126 S. Ct. 704, 708, 163 L. Ed. 2d 547 (2005). “[T]he 20 standard for awarding fees should turn on the reasonableness of the removal.” Id. Fees 21 should be granted under § 1447 where “the removing party lacked an objectively reasonable 22 basis for seeking removal.” Id.

24           In this case, Microsoft clearly “lacked an objectively reasonable basis for seeking 25 removal.” Id. First, as explained above, there is absolutely no basis for Microsoft alleging 26 subject matter jurisdiction, and Microsoft’s attempts to do so misrepresent the content of 1 the expert reports, neither of which “allege patent infringement” by Microsoft. And even if 2 one assumes as true Microsoft’s allegation that “Plaintiffs were seeking damages premised 3 on a finding of infringement of valid patents by Microsoft,” then Microsoft was on notice 4 of those grounds through Khalid’s initial complaint which alleged damage to his patent-5 licensing business and Khalid’s belief that Microsoft was infringing the Disputed Patents.

 6 (Walters Decl. Ex. A at ¶¶27, 33, 54 and 55.) Finally, even if these expert reports could be 7 relied upon to provide a basis for Microsoft to allege federal subject matter jurisdiction, 8 Microsoft has been on notice as to the general subject matter of this expert testimony since 9 March 2023, and a draft report from Tony Mason not differing in any way relevant to this 10 issue was provided to Microsoft on February 8, 2024. (Id. at Exs. E, F, and G.)

12       The Supreme Court has explained, “[t]he appropriate test for awarding fees under § 13 1447(c) should recognize the desire to deter removals sought for the purpose of prolonging 14 litigation and imposing costs on the opposing party, while not undermining Congress’ basic 15 decision to afford defendants a right to remove as a general matter, when the statutory 16 criteria are satisfied.” Id. at 140. Fees are also appropriate pursuant to Rule 11 when removal 17 was presented for the improper purpose of causing delay that unnecessarily increased the 18 costs of litigation. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1).

20       Here, the timing of Microsoft’s notice is incredibly late and premised entirely on 21 allegations in expert reports that were apparent to Microsoft since Khalid’s initial 22 complaint. (Walters Decl. ¶¶ 2-3.) Microsoft filed its notice of removal just four days after 23 declaring the case “ready for trial” in accordance with King County local rules on March 24 28, 2024. And Microsoft’s notice of removal was filed just two days prior to a scheduled 25 pretrial conference on April 5, 2024. Finally, the parties had briefed and argued cross

1 motions for summary judgment and were awaiting the Court's ruling. (Id. ¶¶5-7.)
 2 Microsoft's concern about a possible adverse ruling on Khalid's motion for summary 3 judgment is apparent from its counsel's email to Judge Roger's bailiff on April 4, 2024, 4 alerting chambers to the removal so the Court would take no further action on Khalid's 5 dispositive motion. (Id. Ex. H.)
 6

7 Removal in bad faith to delay trial and avoid adverse rulings in state court should 8 not be condoned. Kerbs, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 138318, at *16. Microsoft's bad faith 9 removal here is very similar to the one at issue in Kerbs. There, Judge Pechman rejected a 10 Defendant's attempt to remove a case on the eve of trial and granted the plaintiff costs and 11 fees finding the Defendant's "reasons for removal to be both dilatory and diversionary." Id.
 12 The Court should make the same finding here. No good faith basis existed for Microsoft to 13 remove this case when it did, and the removal notice had the practical effect of delaying 14 trial and continuing Khalid's harm.
 15

16 IV. CONCLUSION

17 For the aforementioned reasons, this matter should be remanded to King County 18 Superior Court and costs and fees should be awarded to Khalid.
